Ethel Levey started her farewell week at the Palace yesterday, and this was said to be a real farewell, as she is booked abroad for several years to come. Her singing and dancing were received with cordiality, and she herself received plenty of flowers—oh, plenty!—almost enough to make one for each person in the audience.

May Wirth, assisted by her family, did some spectacular riding feats, while Phil, the esquestrian comedian, trailed along in his outlandish costume and managed to extract much amusement from narrowly escaping death. One of the big surprise hits of the programme was the mingling of Joe Cook, the one man vaudeville show, with Alexander Brothers and Evelyn in their ball bouncing act, when Cook, by his irresistible absurdities, proved as apt at juggling laughs as they were at juggling balls. Val and Ernie Stanton, Eva Shirley and L. Wolfe Gilbert were also in the arena.

The finals took place last night at a gala concert by the combined musical clubs of the New York University in Town Hall. For the final test Messrs. Philips and Roberts had assembled eighteen debutantes of the university social set as programme girls for last night's concert.

As the eighteen successful beauties moved about through the audience selling programmes at 25 cents each, Mr. Philips's trained eye was on the look-out for such outstanding points as characteristic grace, strong personality, personal magnetism and "line."

Ten minutes later Mr. Philips said to Mr. Roberts: "That young lady is the ideal. She is "The New York University Girl."

Miss Else Alder played with capital skill the scene in which she tried to get ther big, gawky cave man to steal her from her supposed husband, but though he had a championship swing as a golfer he footled his approach as a golfer he footled his approach as a lover. Miss Alder not only looked captivating, but she is one of the few must relate the first of the first players. We can do so effectively by having the offer and a voice that doesn't bleat like a lamb's at the sentimental passages. She sang agreeably and one never feared she would tear her larynx And she managed to overcome the fact

Josephine and Clarence Nordstrom were fairly effective as youthful lovers, but rome one seemed to have stolen W. B. Lavidson's voice. Miss Bertee Beaumonte, as a typical musical comedy vamp, had a good moment of calisthenics in an Egyptian dance, but most of the time she looked like Miss Frances White and acted like heaven only knows what. Rudoif Friml's music was far above the usual summer show quality, with a
